- The NCMC functions as an all-island group, offering advice to Church authorities on all aspects of the investigative process into alleged abuse (including the areas listed under the role of the advisory panel on Page 3);
- Membership is agreed through the signing of a data processing deed, which allows the sharing of full information with the NCMC and is fully compliant with data protection legislation in both jurisdictions.

Conflict of Roles

Role conflict occurs when a member of safeguarding personnel in a Church body finds that they occupy different and incompatible roles at the same time; so, for instance, a cleric who is the DLP for a Church body cannot act as an advisor for the same Church body; or an advisor to a respondent should not be asked to monitor the respondent's Management Plan; or, in the case of a National Board staff member, they cannot provide advice and guidance to a Church authority and also act as a reviewer of safeguarding practice, for the Church body over which the Church authority has responsibility.

The first task for all role holders is to become fully familiar with the duties and responsibilities that are attached to any role that they occupy in the safeguarding structure (which are outlined above). Role ambiguity needs to be avoided. The Guidance documents that the NBSCCCI has produced to assist with the implementation of the Standards all contain information on the roles of safeguarding personnel in relation to each standard as the first item covered.

APPENDIX A

Canon law is clear about the need to avoid role conflict; so, for instance, Canon 1447 states that:

Any person involved in a case as judge, promotor of justice, defender of the bond, procurator, advocate, witness or expert cannot subsequently, in another instance, validly determine the same case as a judge or exercise the role of assessor in it.

And Canon 1717 §3 states that:

The one who performs this investigation has the same powers and obligations as an auditor in a process. If, later, a judicial process is initiated, this person may not take part in it as a judge.

It can sometimes happen in a Church body, that one person may have two or more safeguarding roles. This may make sense when the workload is not particularly heavy, or where resources are limited. However, the difficulty that can arise for such a person is when their roles are in conflict, one with the other.

Where roles conflict, it is essential that they are carried out by different people.

Personal Conflicts

Conflicts arise that maybe of a more personal nature. For instance, a cleric or religious may be in a safeguarding role in the Church body, and is requested to provide a character reference for a confrere who is the respondent in a criminal child abuse prosecution. This character reference should be given by someone else.

Another area of sensitivity may occur if a respondent cleric or religious is appearing in court, having been prosecuted for child abuse. When considering how to support a colleague cleric or religious in this situation, there are factors which need to be considered, including:

- Does a cleric in clerical garb represent the Church?
- Is the cleric or religious present in the court in a personal capacity?
- Is there a balanced support offered to the complainant by members of the Church?

The simple rule of thumb is, if in doubt, check it out - discuss any potential role conflict with your Church authority or with the NBSCCCI before you undertake a task that you consider may be incompatible with safeguarding roles you hold.
